Rabbinic Reflections

This past Shabbat the Jewish people's peace and safety was shattered as an anti-Semitic gunmen burst into Etz Chayim Temple in Pittsburgh, and brutally murdered eleven righteous individuals. Our lives are forever changed now and to pretend otherwise is to be in denial. Unfortunately, we live in a world where hate and anti-Semitism seems to be on the rise. It can be frightening and debilitating at times. But after last night's Interfaith Healing Service held at Congregation Emanu El, I am comforted. Over 350 people spilled into our building and out of our sanctuary. They preached love, anger, grief and disbelief. They preached PEACE.

Everyone is heartbroken for the Jewish community. They know that hate crimes can shake one's sense of safety and security in the world. We feel a ripple of grief run through our veins, and trauma digs up all kinds of personal traumas we've experienced in our individual lives.

Last night standing on our bima, I was comforted by my fellow clergy's messages of love, peace, and call to justice. So many of those in our faith community and Redlands/San Bernadino family that came out to offer support, spread love and compassion. We have been blessed to receive an outpouring of messages of love and support from family, friends, fellow clergy, and even strangers. Lest you have moments of despair, which is completely understandable in this new landscape we navigate, rest assured that Good is very much alive and well in Redlands California. Rav Kook teaches "We fight senseless hatred with boundless love." That is the only way Emanu El we will survive this. Last night standing on our bima I looked out into our sanctuary and saw faces of love, beaming back at me. I saw Jews from our community, Jews who used to be in our community, children, parents, students, people of all religious backgrounds. And all I felt was love surrounding us, holding our pain, and growing light.

Now more than ever we need one another, Jews and brothers/sisters of other faiths, secular, cultural, spiritual, people drawn to healing and strength. We must have the faith to mourn and know that we will be held. We also must hold onto our identity, be proud of our Jewish forms of expression, and speak out against hate. There is no place for hate here in Emanu El. We are a truly diverse community filled with Jews, and Non-Jews, individuals and families, people who come from a variety of different life experiences. While our differences make meaning in our lives and define our individual journeys, we must focus on our connections. With connection to one another we can heal this trauma, and help create a more meaningful Jewish community for all who wish to be a part. Please be my partner this year in creating that meaningful space for you and yours. If you'd like to see something, or have an idea for a group, program, or kind of service let's create it together.

Now is the time to take action, create connection through community, act up, speak up and build that better world we long for. There are many ways to do this. You can donate to a cause that fights against hate, or supports minorities that are targeted, like HIAS, or ACLU. You can create an experience through our Jewish community that you have always longed for. You can get out and vote, use your voice and participate in our Democratic process in America. You can be a kind and listening ear to those who are struggling, or express your own frustration. This is the time to be mobilized by our anger and fight against hate.

My blessing for us all is, "May we find the strength to make each day a blessing, filled with love and connection for all whom we encounter." Ken Yehi Ratzon, May it be so!

*B'Shalom,
Rabbi Lindy Reznick*

80TH COMMEMORATION KRISTALLNACHT [NIGHT OF BROKEN GLASS] NOVEMBER 9, 2018 – A Musical Commemoration at CEE

Eighty years ago, on this night, Jews throughout Germany and Austria awoke to cries of synagogues on fire, shattered storefronts and only a foreboding sense of Hitler's Final Solution. 'Good' German Jews, like my maternal grandfather, Dr. Willy Katzenstein, who proudly fought for Germany in WWI, were certain their lives would not be affected. Despite his position as a respected lawyer and president of the liberal synagogue in Bielefeld – a northwestern city in Westphalia - it would take months for them to acquire documents and all the necessary papers to leave Germany.

My grandfather obligingly helped many other Jewish families with their paperwork – visas and affidavits - to emigrate, but without the insistence and urging of my grandmother, might never have followed through for his own family. They had, after all, been there for generations, still living in the house my great grandfather built before his son was born in 1874! Now my grandfather was raising his own children in the house he grew up in - with the beautiful garden that my mother and her little sister [my aunt in London who turned 93 this year!] loved to play in. Not only did he have to leave his house behind, but also his carefully tended garden, about which he wrote in his poem 'Mein Garten' [My Garden] before they left in 1939, ... someone else will have to appreciate the blossoms I will no longer see... My mother, Marianne, and her sister, Eva, were fortunate to leave Germany on the Kindertransport with hundreds of other children, in May 1939.

My mother, of blessed memory, who passed away in February of last year, spoke at Congregation Emanu El in 2011 – every time she told her Kristallnacht story of 'the Synagogue Key' – at Yom Hashoah and Kristallnacht commemorations, in churches and synagogues around the country – there was invariably an audible gasp at the end of her story as she slipped her hand in her pocket and held up 'the Key' for all to see.

I feel a great responsibility to continue to share my mother's story to help keep the memories alive and remind people, as she always did, how important it is to be open and tolerant of others, regardless of our differences. In October of 2013, I was fortunate to join my London cousins and aunt on a 'road trip' to our mothers' hometown in Germany, where, with friends, members of the press and local town folk, we dedicated bronze sidewalk plaques – Stolpersteine – [stepping stones] in front of their former home. Over the past ten years, Stolpersteine have become familiar landmarks throughout Europe memorializing Jews and political dissidents, many brutally murdered, who were forced to leave their ancestral homes.

Music is also a 'key' to the past, and a powerful connection to our history as well as other cultures and generations, young and old. Together with Jerry Ripley and our congregational choir, in commemoration of this auspicious date, the music of our Shabbat services on November 9th will be punctuated by composers common to the liberal synagogues of that era in Germany and Austria, Louis Lewandowski, in particular. It also reflects the grand musical beginnings of Classical Reform Judaism.

We hope you will join us for this special service to consecrate the memory of this time in our history. May we never forget our past, may we continue to teach our children our history so that they will always understand and know where they came from, while we also celebrate with them and the generations to come, the joys and blessings of our rich traditions. Ken y'hi ratzon.

B'shalom,

Cantor Jennifer Bern-Vogel

Presidential Perspectives

When I awoke Saturday morning to learn of the Shooting at the Tree of Life Synagogue in Pittsburgh, I was consumed with much emotion and many questions. Questions like, how could such evil create so much pain? And, if it could happen there, could it not happen here?

Improving security at our Temple has been a high priority that has been discussed at length for quite some time. A Security Task Force was created that continues to brainstorm a number of options all of which have yet to be implemented. This time last year, I met personally with then Police Chief Mark Garcia to discuss various options and to begin building a collaborative partnership.

This led to the department conducting a walk-through of our building concluding that the many glass doors and windows which make our building so beautiful and provide unparalleled views, also make it a serious challenge to properly secure. Regardless, we continued to look at ways to increase protection which involve surveillance cameras, building a secure perimeter, armed on-site protection along with active shooter training for staff and congregants, just to name a few. It is difficult if not impossible to straddle that balance of properly shielding our members without creating an environment which most certainly would alter the sense of freedom we have always enjoyed to worship and celebrate. And then there is the financial side. All of this comes with a very high price tag which shouldn't be a consideration, but always is.

So now, after eleven innocent souls were gunned down while attending Saturday Shabbat services, we once again feel the fear and trepidation that comes in the moments following. We wonder if something like this is possible at Congregation Emanu El, and what must now be done to ensure it isn't. At vigils and demonstrations across the country the overarching message remains that fear will not deter us and that hate, bigotry and antisemitism will never win or compromise our Jewish way of life. Easy to say, yet, we continue to be fearful. Fear is a natural emotion when we feel out of control. This continues to be fed by our 24 hour news cycle and the slippery slope of our Social Media world. So, how do we get past the fear and regain some sense of control and peace? Psychologists suggest we take time out to think clearly through the fear; breathe deeply through the panic, visualize a happy place and a path forward - and above all talk about it. This is exactly what happened at our Interfaith and Community prayer vigil on Monday, October 29.

It was a time for our congregation and wider community to come together to work through the pain - to pray and heal. We have been told time and again the importance of staying united as a people and that there is strength in numbers. The Jewish people hold countless moments in its history when our very existence was in peril. That fear continually forced us to unify. Being a member of a Congregation means that you are a part of an effort to ensure the Jewish community remains united and resolved. This is more important today than ever before. This synagogue does not exist merely for elaborate celebrations or gatherings. At its core, this Temple stands because of those who through the years championed the importance of maintaining a house of worship dedicated to the strength, welfare and existence of the Jewish people. Our prayer vigil underscored this idea and was a poignant time to stand arm in arm with our Jewish brothers and sisters and all those from the community who filled our synagogue with support and love.

It too was yet another reminder that we must remain a galvanized community unified by the simple purpose of not letting this kind of an act define us. May we always remember what it means to be Jewish, compassionate, unafraid and hopeful. Through the hate, may we always see that there exists a better way and a brighter tomorrow, as summed up by Tree of Life Rabbi Jeffrey Meyers: "We are a Tree of Life, you may cut off some branches but we will rebuild and we will be back stronger and better than ever."

L'Shalom,

Greg Weissman

Treasurer's Report

Shalom!

I hope this edition of our Temple Bulletin finds you and your family enjoying the beautiful weather that Southern California offers us at this time of year!

November is a month filled with secular holidays. I hope that you enjoy the time you get to spend with family and friends celebrating the blessings you have.

Please remember to honor your Kol Nidre Pledge Drive pledges. We are on track to have a budget deficit at year end (June 2019). One way to decrease this deficit is to increase our membership and/or to receive unexpected donations and contributions.

We have membership opportunities for singles, individuals and families. Bring a friend or family to a Friday or Saturday service and let them see how warm and welcoming our Temple is.

Our Temple is fortunate to have engaging members who give both their time and dollars to support our programs. As the end of the year approaches, please remember your Temple while making any year end donations.

Sincerely,

Kathy Rosenfeld

Sisterhood Speaks

Like many of you, I am looking forward to Thanksgiving. I do the cooking for my working daughters, and it is my great pleasure. Cooking is sort of a meditative experience for me, with a bit of chemistry thrown in. On behalf of my family, I wish you and yours a lovely family Thanksgiving, with abundant health and happiness to be grateful for.

Last month I attended the Women of Reform Judaism Pacific District convention in San Diego. There was singing, prayer, Torah study, leadership, social justice topics all crammed into three and one-half exciting days. Conventions are a real re-charge for me because I am participating with so many women who have the same dedication as I do to a congregation, and to implementing a dynamic Jewish present and future for our congregations.

Thank you to everyone who has sent in Sisterhood dues this year. We were honored at our paid up membership brunch to have Julia Weinstein from the Women of Reform Judaism Pacific District facilitating a discussion of advocating for Progressive Jewish values worldwide by building caring communities.

If you missed this important and thought-provoking morning, we will have a variety of free mini-programs throughout the year to which everyone is invited. On Sunday, November 18, Jenna Fields of Sharsheret will continue the conversation on creating caring communities with a workshop dealing with support of those facing difficult health diagnoses. On Sunday, December 16, Sisterhood invites everyone to join Nancy Sidhu on a morning nature walk. On Sunday afternoon, January 13, Nancy will again moderate a multi-faith panel, presenting stories from other faith traditions. In February, we plan to host a self-defense seminar, although the date is not yet determined. Rabbi Reznick will lead us in an interactive program to express our spirituality through the arts on Sunday, March 24. Again this year, Beth Freimuth will teach meditation techniques to increase feelings of inner peace at a mini program on Sunday, April 28. As you save the dates on your personal calendar, add Sunday, June 2 for our Spring Brunch. We have not finalized our program as yet, but you can be sure that our Program Vice President, Susan Damron, will present us with another stimulating event!

In the more immediate future is our annual Chanukah party. Yes, Chanukah is rather early this year. Plan to join us for dinner on Friday, December 7 at 6 pm. Adults will pay $10 for dinner and children under thirteen will be free. Reservations are essential if we are to have enough for everyone. If you are interested in helping to make the fresh, hot latkes we are going to enjoy, contact First Vice President Karyn Lehmann at karyn@pawsredlands.com.

From Our Director of Education & Youth

Hello Emanu El!

The School for Jewish Living has been moving along nicely. We have spent this month learning about Shabbat and we will end this unit of study with a Shabbat snack and craft hour during class. We also began our Hebrew in Harmony hybrid curriculum and we are all getting settled into the online component of this program – it's exciting to utilize technology in this way!

In this month, we will begin our unit on Chanukah. We will be talking about the fun and family aspect of this holiday, but we will also look deeply into themes of bravery, faith, and perseverance. We will be working on some entertainment for all of you during school days and we will showcase our students' talents for you during our congregational Chanukah service and dinner in December. We will also start a more intense look at tefillah this month, combining in class practice, Hebrew in Harmony, and leadership during our Tot Shabbat service.

We are looking forward to a wonderful month at the School for Jewish Living!

Mental Health Awareness in Action

Right now (November 2, 2018), UCLA is hosting the annual Conference on Art, Neuroscience and Psychiatry. This year's topic is "Music, Mental Health, and Marginalized Communities."

Did you notice the word "music?" No doubt Vijay Gupta did. He's a young violinist with the LA Philharmonic. You may have seen the article by Steve Lopez about him in the LA Times last month. Mr. Gupta had just won a MacArthur grant (the "genius" one). And it wasn't for his playing with the Phil.

Mr. Gupta truly understands that art and creativity are necessary for our well-being, all our well-being. His nature and his experience make him especially aware of people on the disrespected outskirts of society – the homeless, the jailed, many of whom have mental illness. That's where he goes to work his wonders.

He is co-founder and plays with Street Symphony. And they do it in the streets and in the prisons. The musicians are professionals and also residents of skid row in LA. And he's dreaming big about using the grant for hundreds more concerts than they've already done.

We all need to make music (or visual art, poetry, dance, beauty). Imagine a world where everyone makes music together, as a matter of course in our daily lives. At work, on the bus, walking home from a restaurant in the evening, Sunday in the park (no boom boxes – live voices.) The quality might not be the highest, but art wouldn't be owned by an 'elite,' and the rest of us wouldn't feel we needed to perform at top standard. (Have you ever sat at a concert and just wanted to get up and dance or sing?) Art could be democratized, available, everywhere. Maybe our well-being would all be enhanced.

Mr. Gupta might not agree – he's worked very hard to become one of the youngest members of a top class orchestra. But he works just as hard bringing beautiful music to those who struggle and stumble. Music isn't the same as medication many of us need for mental or physical ailments, but it is one of the best ways to enhance all our lives.
