Rabbinic Reflections

Anyone who has ever struggled with illness themselves or watched a loved one sink into illness, has a passport to “the land of the sick”. This land, as Susan Sontag once named it, is somewhere unique. In this land people respond to the question how are you with honesty, they love without fear, and they often take naps. I am blessed to be recovering from a surgery which ideally will keep me away from the land of the sick, and yet I am still in recovery, dwelling in this land. After surgery our bodies take time to adjust back to where they were before our operation. Sometimes they never return to what they were like before hand. By choosing this surgery I become a member of this land, and am granted a passport.

Those who spend time in the land of the sick may be familiar with some of its special qualities. If you’ve been blessed to be very healthy you could still have interfaced with the land of the sick. We might enter this land when we walk into a hospital or a nursing home. We notice the different smells, sounds, slower pace of life in this new world. The magic of this land is that It can grant us special outlooks on life that those who don’t visit aren’t accustomed too. For me I became very aware and now have a deep appreciation for how my body functions. I am in awe of the bodies ability to heal. I understand pain, a little more deeply than I did before. Doctors here are like Gods, they gently guide our recovery, dictate what we can and can’t do, and help us navigate the new reality we face each day.

As I continue to recover, I also prepare myself for a third surgery on this journey. I am grateful for my passport which brings me here. I know that as I walk this journey I am not only humbled, but being molded into a more sensitive and caring person. I know that as I accept my limitations, face fears, and become part of a special group of women, I am transforming because of my time in this sacred space.

Emanu El thank you for walking this journey with me, thank you for stamping my passport as I join some of you on this journey. This year so many have visited this Land, and we have felt the weight and shifting of priorities while living here. I pray that as we move forward into a new reality and away from illness that together we continue to transform. I pray that our hearts are opened just a little bit more, that with each breath our acceptance of ourselves grows, and that we continue to connect deeply and share the stories of our lives with one another. May we one day experience a refuah shleimah, a complete renewal of body and mind and spirit.

Rabbi Lindy Reznick

Cantorial Comments

Summer Torah Cantillation classes!

It’s hard to believe that it’s already ‘that’ time again! I don’t mean summer, although that certainly is a wonderful notion. And I’m not referring to the fact that we are starting to ‘open up’ and will gradually begin to gather together again, although that is a very exciting and positive development after these many months of being sequestered in our zoom rooms. What I AM referring to, however, is [are you sitting down?] that with Selichot on August 28th - the High Holy Days are just over two months away!! Erev Rosh Hashanah begins September 6th and Yom Kippur Day is September 16th.

I will be teaching my summer HHD Cantillation prep class at the end of this month until the beginning of August. At the time of this writing, we don’t yet know what form our services will take this year, but rest assured, you will be part of it – whether via zoom or in the sanctuary!

Please contact me if you are interested in chanting Torah for the High Holy Days this year at Cantorjenbv@gmail.com If this is your first foray into chanting, a minimum amount of Hebrew language is recommended.

Tentative class schedule/subject to changes!

Wednesdays at 3pm via zoom:

JUNE 23, 30 • JULY 7, 14, 21, 28 • AUGUST 4, 11

For Summer

Heat and light

Day overtakes night

Warm air settles over the earth

The land vibrant with growth...

Bless this day, God of seasons,

Bless the summer with energy and vitality,

So that all Your creatures

Enter the coming seasons

In the fullness of Your bounty.

God of time and space

May this season be a blessing and a teacher ...

Bless my days with service

And my evenings with rest.

Make me like the summer dawn,

Vibrant, awake, vital, and ready.

Sisterhood Speaks

Rabbi Emeritus Hillel Cohn, Rabbi Douglas Kohn, Rabbi Jay Sherwood, Interim Rabbi Darryl Crystal, and Rabbi Lindy Reznick. These are the members of clergy I have been so fortunate to have known since my husband and I arrived at Congregation Emanu El in 2013. We entered the Temple doors the first night the new building was opened, and we were the first couple to marry in this new Shul. Lisa Wise-Wolk, Margie Orland, Heidi Nimmo, Nancy Sidhu, Phyllis Sweet, Caroldyne Swedlove, were some of our first friends. After the warm reception of many, my husband declared, “We’re staying here...this is our Temple.”

Karyn Lehmann, Leslie Soltz, Francesca Sweet, and Stacy Knox—these are the women that I have been fortunate enough to observe as Sisterhood Presidents. It has been a pleasure witnessing their compassion and commitment to members of our CEE Family over the years. Throughout my time as a member, I was offered various opportunities to become involved with Sisterhood. This ranged from Stacy creating opportunities to bake Hamantaschen together in the Temple kitchen before Purim, to Leslie asking me to bake a honey-apple cake for Rosh Hashanah to Francesca Sweet and a nominating committee suggesting that I consider serving as the Sisterhood Recording Secretary. I was honored and I accepted the mantle. I was asked to serve an additional term as Recording Secretary, and I delighted in the opportunity to serve a second term. When the next slate nominated me to serve as the 1st Vice President of Sisterhood, I was again honored.

I loved that our President Karyn Lehmann had a leadership style in which she modeled an example of leading with kindness and love. Her term was fraught with crisis due to a pandemic, and multiple losses within our congregation through its members or their extended family, stood gracefully perpetuating a caring community, nurturing the congregation, and supporting our clergy, and promoting Jewish values by the way she lived. She modeled the Women of Reform Judaism (WRJ) mission not just in words, but in deed. We are a wonderful community. We are traditional and progressive. This is a community that makes room for everyone.

We have a loving, capable Rabbi, who is an excellent educator. We have a fantastic Board of Directors who represent our inclusive CEE Family. We have a membership that has been with us for years, and a virtual community that continues to grow.

As I accept the mantle as Sisterhood President, my prayer for us is that we continue to perpetuate the legacy of past Presidents. Speaking of presidents, we will miss the leadership of President Stuart Sweet! A leader who was technologically efficient, creative, kind, humorous. In the midst of a pandemic, he kept us safe, informed, and reminded us that even when times were tough—we could still find reasons to smile. This was therapeutic for many of us. We also look forward to having Dr. Susan Damron as our new president. She has also been the Vice President of Programs for Sisterhood. I love that members of our CEE Family embrace change and challenge ourselves in new ways, to serve-- to make our family more caring, more loving, and more welcoming—whether we are in-person or virtual. Moving forward, may we have the courage to continue to thrive, safely, and healthfully, embracing the various missions that await us on the horizon. My husband and I both served as soldiers in the United States Army. I am retired now. I hope that I can make you proud and serve you with the same commitment I demonstrated when I served our country.

L’Chaim,

Kimberly Wolfe Morgan

Presidential Perspectives

So long, and thanks for all the fish

Curiously enough, the dolphins had long known of the impending demolition of Earth and had made many attempts to alert mankind to the danger. But most of their communications were misinterpreted as amusing attempts to punch footballs, or whistle for titbits, so they eventually gave up and left the Earth by their own means - shortly before the Vogons arrived. The last ever dolphin message was misinterpreted as a surprisingly sophisticated attempt to do a double backwards somersault through a hoop, whilst whistling the ‘Star-Spangled Banner’. But, in fact, the message was this: “So long and thanks for all the fish”.

Douglas Adams, The Hitchhiker’s Guide To The Galaxy

For these past many years, these articles, written first as your treasurer, then as your Vice President, and now as your President, have been presented with humble hopes. That you would think a little differently, that you would be entertained, that you might be inspired by the community that we have all built.

At this moment, we all emerge from our own private cocoons, looking optimistically toward a future of togetherness, of community, and of once again “dressing to impress.” Our vaccinated bodies make us feel like superheroes, and we can’t wait to fly straight into each other’s arms. It is this world which beckons us. What an exciting world it will be. And how exciting that we will all have ambitious, compassionate, and empathetic leadership in Dr. Susan Damron. She is indeed the person for this moment, and she has all of our support.

It has been a genuine privilege to have served you in congregational leadership. If you have the opportunity to serve, you should. There is no feeling like it. Who knows, one day you might be the one writing an article like this.

Until then, so long and thanks for all the fish. Believe it or not, the quote at top was made into a musical number in 2005, and of course you can hear it by clicking anywhere in this article. Would you expect anything less?

Mental Health Awareness in Action Cave syndrome

We are creeping out. We are bursting forth. This is a time of re-entry. Re-entry into the world, a world that has changed and one that is not quite safe yet. But we are coming out of our isolation, our small home bubbles, our inactivity. We long to be 'normal,' whatever that is exactly. But we're not quite sure....

Op-ed editor for the Los Angeles Times Nicholas Goldberg has been talking about and thinking carefully about what New York psychiatrist Michael Dulchin calls "cave syndrome." In fact, Mr. Goldberg was talking about it before he had quite realized what it was and how pervasive it was. He discovered it in himself.

Cave syndrome is not a disease. It's more like a tendency. After a year plus of our strange pandemic life, staying home, avoiding people, developing procedures to keep safe from COVID-19, we're hesitant to go out again and resume normal life. At first, Mr. Goldberg understood this as a problem for people with social anxiety and introverts, but as he delved more, he found it in others and then in himself, an extrovert with no noticeable social anxiety.

Isn't it reasonable after such a long time avoiding people, working from home, masking up and washing hands often, isn't it reasonable to have some difficulty readjusting? We think so. Because we know the virus has not gone. There are new variants out there the scientists are quite concerned about. We've also seen whole countries return to more or less 'normal' and then have to return to lockdowns as the virus surges and kills.

And maybe there's something else as well that Dr. Dulchin and Mr. Goldberg didn't think of. Maybe the hectic pace of our lives, the hours-long, nerve wracking commute, the rushing here and there – maybe all that is not something we really want to go back to. Maybe at some level we've enjoyed a calmer, quieter life. Maybe we just want less stress and more time with our children and others we love. Let that come back, and some partying, concerts, and sports, but hold some of the rest. It's not clear that the life we had before, that we collectively created, is all that comfortable and healthy for us.

Heidi Nimmo and Nancy Sidhu, Co-Chairs, Mental Health Awareness In Action (MHAI)

From Our Director of Education & Youth

I cannot believe it is summer break already! I am looking forward to next school year when we all get back again to in-person learning. Over the summer, I will be working with Rabbi Reznick to improve our school and our programs. I look forward to creating meaningful curriculum and enriching activities for our in-person classes.

I will be also working on the Boruchin Family education center. Thanks to the generosity of the Boruchin family, we will be able to create a flexible learning center for our temple. The center will be a much-needed space for Teens to socialize and work on projects, for teachers to work collaboratively, a family-friendly space where parents and children can meet and learn and a comfortable place for L'Dor Va Dor program. We plan to renovate the large classroom, have it painted, purchase new furniture, technology, and curriculum.

Have a restful summer,

Marcela Lavi
